MONEY FOR CAPITOL REPAIRS

$100,000 READY TO BEGIN THE WORK AT ALBANY.

Scarchers in the Ruins Find the Body of the Watchman Relies of Swords and Coins-Expert to Examine the Capitol Wiring Smoke Still Rising.

ALBANY, March 31.—An emergency mes sage was received from Gov. Dix to-day permitting the immediate passage of As semblyman A. E. Smith's bill appropriating $100,000 for repairs to the State Capitol caused by the fire. The Assembly and Senate passed the bill in a jiffy. The State Trustees of Public Buildings are authorized to expend the money.

It was definitely learned to-day that the fire in the State Capitol had resulted in materials; perfect in style and fit. one fatality. The body of Samuel J. Abbott, 77 years old, who was employed as a watchman, was found buried under try and check the flames or in an endeavor to escape, and was overcome by the heavy smoke before he could make his way to safety. Identification was made by means of a gold watch which Abbott carried, and which was about two-thirds melted in the remnants of his clothing.

The watchman's body was found in a little corridor of the fourth floor in the library department under the southwest cupola. This section of the building was filled with oak partitions, which burned like tissue paper. From the position in which Abbott's body was found it is believed that he was overcome by smoke and fell in an attempt to get out of the building. There were tons of debris upon the body and it took the firemen nearly twenty-four hours to reach it.

During the day there were found in the charred swords with the handles gone. The latter were blackened and half meited. Gen. Worth, who served conspicuously in the War of 1812. In fact on one of these swords it was possible to discover an in-The presentation was made in 1813.

The presentation was made in 1813.

The swords, medals and coins were taken to the Executive Chamber and by order of Gov. Dix were sent to a safety deposit company. Possibly some of the relies can be restored Some of the medals and coins were meited into the most fantastic shapes. Among other relies which were recovered by ten. Verleck personally was part of what had been a valuable work on "Quadrupeds of North America." This work was written by John J. Audubon and profusely illustrated.

Gov. Dix had a further conference early in the day with State Architect Ware, as the result of which it was de-termined to have an expert examination Ware, as the result of which it was determined to have an expert examination made at once of the electric wiring of the Capitol Corridors and departments. Acting under direction of the State trustees of Public Buildings State Architect Ware called into action the big contracting firm of Callanan & Prescott of Keeseville, Clinton county, which did much important construction work on the west end of the Capitol, the burned section, when the building was completed during the administration of Gov. Frank S, Black, The contracting firm was instructed to assemble a plant and put a gang of men to work immediately to protect the walls of the burned tower sections, take down dangerous parts of such walls and erect a temporary roof. The firm will, it is expected, have a force of men engaged getting out the rubbish by to-morrow. Under the direction of the State Architect and State Superintendent of Public Buildings several hundred men secured from Feeney & Sheehan, contractors, continued work in removing rubbish from the interior, and worked especially to get the Assembly Chamber in condition for use next week.

Snoke was still pouring out of the windows of the burned structure this condition and a condition for use next week.

the Assembly Chamber in condition for use next week.

Smoke was still pouring out of the windows of the burned structure this morning and two engines were still pumping water into the building.

Commissioner Andrew S. Draper of the Department of Education is inclined to believe to-day that more of the precious State records and historical papers are safe than was at first supposed to be the case. Altogether in the burned portion of the Capitol there were about 300,000 documents stored, and most of these have been buried under in the burned portion of the Capitol there were about 300,000 documents stored, and most of these have been buried under plaster and débris, soaked with water and scorched by fire so that even if found they will be worthless.

At a meeting of the State Trustees of Public Buildings to-day leases of houses in the private residence district for State departments driven out by the fire were approved. The leases approved were of the Waterman house, at 162 State street, for the State Board of Charities; 140 Washington avenue, for the State Board of Charities; 140 Washington avenue, for the State Board of Charities; 140 Washington avenue, for the State Board of Charities; 140 Washington avenue, for the State Excise Department. The latter house was occupied last winter by former Governor Horace White, who was then the Lieutenant-Governor.

By direction of the Trustees of Public Buildings, after it had been decided that the sweeping of paper into the street to be blown all over the city must be stopped. Superintendent of Buildings Bowe was authorized to contract with Feeney & Sheehan for the erection of a fence around that portion of Capitol Park to the west of the Capitol where the rubbish and burned papers will be disposed of through the chutes only in this part of the contractors to draw away the rubbish and debris, which will be deposited through the chutes only in this part of the contractors to draw away the part of the momination and election of all the Common Pleas Judges on the securing the nomination and election of all the Common Pleas Judges on the securing the nomination and election of all the Common Pleas Judges on the securing the nomination and election of all the Common Pleas Judges on the securing the nomination and election of all the Common Pleas Judges on the securing the nomination and election of all the Common Pleas Judges on the securing the nomination and election of all the Common Pleas Judges on the securing the nomination and election of all the Common Pleas Judges on the securing the nomin Superintendent of Buildings Bowe was authorized to contract with Feeney & Sheehan for the erection of a fence around that portion of Capitol Park to the west of the Capitol where the rubbish and burned papers will be disposed of through chutes to run from the windows in the damaged portion of the building to the ground.
